

Be Beautiful

Once you have set your wedding date it's important to organise a tailored program to suit your individual skin, so it will look its best on the day right through to your honeymoon too. When it comes to skin there are many specialised effective treatments out there that will bring results very quickly, so it's important to chat to your therapist about your beauty schedule for your big day. To avoid having in-grown hairs and unsightly regrowth most brides opt for laser permanent hair reduction, which takes five months to achieve. Although a spray tan, pedicures and manicures are the last things to be done before the big day, it is important to do a test run a month prior to the big day in order to see if you like the colours and to test the lasting abilities of the tan. Exercise is always important because it promotes blood flow and oxygen to the tissues, to give you a healthy glow.

Flying High

As Australians we freely celebrate life and love on a daily basis and dare to dream and attain the wishes of princes and princesses and play, in often a majestically perfect world. Tropical Australia offers such a salubrious playground. The seductive natural cathedrals of tropical north Queensland offer an irresistible recipe of romance and ambience for every special day. So what are the essential elements to your romantic experience in the tropics? There should definitely be a chartered private helicopter and personalised and attentive service for your every whim. Consider a proposal from a remote mountain peak, arrive in style to your wedding ceremony on a white sandy beach or have your wedding photos taken from the sky while on a pristine coral island, you can even elope for your nuptials to a secret rainforest waterfall or fly to an exotic resort for your honeymoon. We hope you believe as we do, that you deserve it.

Makeup

Your wedding day is one of the most significant days of your life and you want to look your best walking down the aisle. How you are going to look on your wedding day is important to you right? So don't leave the task of hiring a makeup artist for your wedding to the last minute, be the image of elegance and perfection. On your wedding day the last thing you want is to look like your makeup is packed on layers thick. Most brides want to look natural, while highlighting their best features, with definition for the photographs. Book in with your chosen make-up artist at least six months before the big day and make sure you have a trial done before you make your booking to ensure it doesn't turn out to be a disaster. Look for someone that will travel to you on your wedding day usually in the convenience of your own home. This is more time efficient and relaxing for you so you are not rushing from one appointment to the next being held up in traffic or by others that require attention in a salon environment on the same day. Your wedding day should be all about you and you want to have your makeup artists' full attention. Let them do the running around and fuss over you. When you do schedule your trial, book it during the daytime so you can see what your makeup will look like during the day - it's also a good idea to choose a date when you have another function as once your makeup is done you'll want to go out.

The Stud Factor

Today's grooms care just as much about how they look as their dazzling brides. Gone are the days when the groom simply turns up in the suit his fiancée has chosen. Today's groom puts time and effort into choosing the right suit and accessories, knowing that he too, will have eyes on him. The main thing a groom needs to consider when choosing their suit and accessories is what the bride will be wearing. The same is true of the groomsmen's outfits. Then the decision comes as to hire, buy or have made. Most grooms and groomsmen hire their suits and this is a very sensible option as they unlikely to wear them again.

Trash Your Dress

Engagement shoots are fine and a great way to get to know your photographer before your big day, but if you really want some amazing wedding images aside from the ones actually taken on the day then why not "trash your dress". To some this might sound a little extreme, but it's not so much about "trashing" it, more just not having to worry about it so much and getting some incredible photographs in the process. Before you have it dry cleaned put it on one last time and explore your adventurous side. Imagine being down at the beach as the sun rises, the lights perfect and you can wade through the ocean, a pristine rain forest creek, a torrential downpour or a mud puddle – take off the heels, pull on the gum boots and get creative. If you would like more information just Google "trash the dress". It's very popular internationally so the web is full of photographs and videos from such shoots.
